A Go-Local Guide for Products and Services

The Continental Club

Homegrown in Central Texas

A Go-Local Guide for Products and Services in the Central Texas Area

Why Go Local?

A marketplace made up of thousands of small businesses helps to ensure more innovation, competition and lower prices over the long term. Independent businesses choosing products based on what their local customers need and desire, not a national sales plan, guarantees a more diverse and relevant range of product and service choices.

About This Guide

Locally-owned businesses contribute not just to our economy but also to our culture. From funky to sophisticated, the independent businesses of Central Texas foster vibrant and diverse choices. This guide serves as a listing of some of the unique establishments that have been around long enough to see Austin grow into a one-of-a-kind city.

Farmers' Markets

The local farmers' market is the ultimate "homegrown" experience. Not only do farmers' markets offer fresher, tastier and higher-quality products, but they also boost the local economy by providing job opportunities for area residents. Traditionally, farmers' markets have focused on produce, but these days, you can usually find just about anything you can think of, including unique artisan crafts created by regional vendors. You can also find other locally-made goodies like breads, jellies, cheeses, eggs and flowers. Please refer to our Central Texas Farmers' Market Guide to locate a farmers' market in your area: stewart.com/content/dam/stewart/Microsites/austin/PDFs/farmers-market-guide.pdf
