To Marie Monstre:

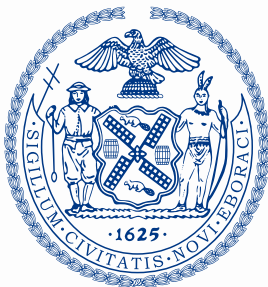

There appears to have been some confusion regarding my client Igor Courbe's ownership of the Frankenstein castle. When Mr. Monstre died and you vacated the property for a chic London flat, Igor was left to his own devices. Having occupied the property for many years, his claim of adverse possession has, we believe, suitable standing in a court of law.

We demand that you withdraw any claim to the castle and concede gracefully to this small, smelly man.

Yours faithfully,

Gerhard Gehörd, Esq.
